

Every Tuesday morning Mary has art class at her school. Mary isn't happy. She hates art.

Mary is sitting at her desk. She can't draw very well. "It's too hard," she says.

David is Mary's friend.
He loves art class.
He can draw very well.

David is sitting next to Mary.
"I can help you," says David.
"Drawing is easy. I draw shapes to help me."

“Look,” says David.
“You can draw a house using triangles and squares.”

“Can you draw animals with shapes?” asks Mary.
“Yes, I can,” says David.

David shows Mary how to draw a dog.

“You can use circles, triangles, and ovals,” he says.

David shows Mary how to draw a farmer.

“You can use rectangles and diamonds,” he says.

“Now it’s your turn. Try and draw a cat,” says David.
“You can use ovals and triangles.”

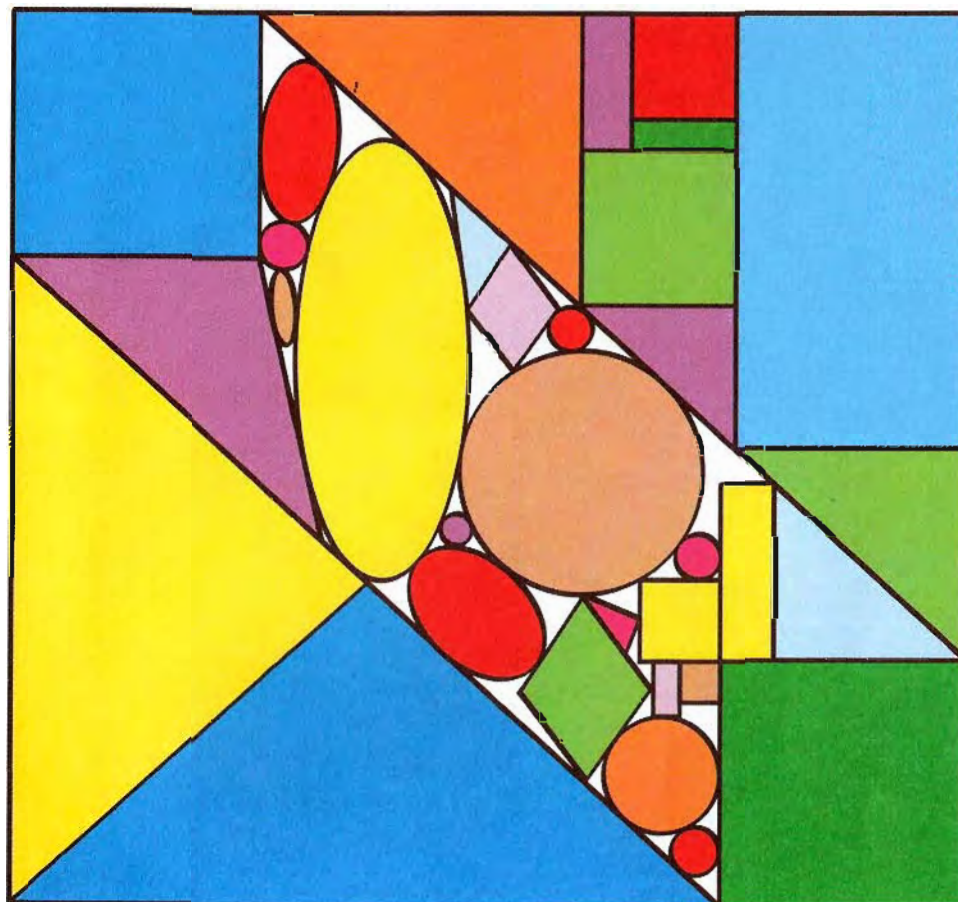

Now Mary can draw all on her own. She draws a picture of a beautiful farm.

Mary likes art now, and she loves art class on Tuesday mornings.
