The general trend of the results was that the higher the degree of polymerization, the lower the viscosity.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The light source (laser) emits a beam that passes through a lens and a polarizer. The beam is then directed onto a beam splitter, which splits the beam into two paths. One path is directed onto a mirror, and the other path is directed onto a lens. The beam splitter is positioned such that the two paths intersect at a point. The mirror is positioned such that it reflects the beam back towards the beam splitter. The lens is positioned such that it focuses the beam onto a detector. The detector is a photodiode that measures the intensity of the beam.
