Film: Eadweard Muybridge Photographs of Motion

Put in order the sentences:

- In the end, not only did Muybridge prove that all four hooves of the horse did in fact leave the ground at the same time, but he also caused a sensation in the general public.
- Muybridge used twelve cameras activated by strings as the horse galloped through them.
- Stanford commissioned Eadweard Muybridge to take photographs of his priceless horse "Occident"
- Stanford wanted to know whether a galloping horse's four hooves leave the ground at the same time.
