

Andy Warhol

Andy Warhol was born in the United States in 1928. He began his career as a commercial artist and many of his most famous pictures draw on his knowledge of advertising and design.

Warhol was fascinated by famous faces and carefully created a celebrity image of his own, wearing a wild white wig to make sure he stood out from other people.

In 1968, he was shot and nearly killed by a former assistant. He died in 1987.

Warhol also made experimental films, including a six-hour film of a man sleeping and an eight-hour film of the Empire State Building.
