THE FATHER AND HIS TWO DAUGHTERS

Once upon a time, a man had two daughters.

The first one got married with a gardener and the other with a tile-maker.

One day, the father went to the daughter who had married with the gardener to know how she was doing and how everything with her was.

She said:

- Everything is prospering with me and is very nice, too. I feel very good, but there is only one thing... I have a wish! I hope that one day there will be a heavy fall of rain, because then the plants will be watered and grow a lot!

The father thought that was a very good idea and it would make her daughter feel perfect.

After some days, he went to the daughter who had been married with the tile-maker and asked her:

- How are you? How is everything going with you?
- I'm living in a perfect life and I'm very well but I wish that the dry weather would continue, because then the sun would shine hot and bright, so the bricks may be dried and my husband will be very happy- she said.

The father was very confused because the first daughter wanted the opposite thing than the second one. Finally he wondered to her:

- If your sister wishes for rain, and you for dry weather, with which of the two am I to join my wishes?'

And the moral of the story is you can't please everybody.
